42. Further Description of Important Interior and Exterior Features (Continued on Reverse if Necessary)						6. Specific Address or Location 691 East College Street
This Colonial Revival, Cape Cod house has a central gabled entry, which projects from the house. The door has a square window in it and shutters surround it. A filled fanlight is located above the door and a brick arch with a keystone follows the arch. The gable above the door has a cornice below and returns. At the left and right of the door are six-over-six windows with shutters. Keystones are located above the first story windows. The second continued...
43. History and Significance (Continue on Reverse if necessary)
This house first appears in city directories in 1961 and Joseph T. and Dorothy W. Hungate lived in it at least between 1961 and 1970 (City Directories). According to city directories, the house was built between 1956-61, however, the house may be as much as 10 to 30 years older than that, based on its style. Joseph, who graduated from Oberlin High School, was a renowned professor in the Piano Department at the Oberlin Conservatory (O-High, City Directories, Hi-Oh-Hi).
44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings (See #52)
A detached, two-car carriage house has two gable dormers. The house is surrounded by other residences, all of which are in good condition. story features gabled dormers with six-panel casement windows. At the east elevation, a two-story porch has Tuscan columns at the first story. A door is located left of center, and simple posts are in the balustrade of the second story porch. A set of three windows are located in the first story, with obscured, arched windows in the second story. The west elevation has a wing that extends from the rear of the house, and the windows at this elevation have shutters. The majority of the side elevations are obscured by trees and other vegetation.
